GATHOLICS HOLD RITES IN HOMES

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15.—Observance of religious ceremonies in private homes, but with semi-public attendance, has begun as a result of the conflict between Church and state. Many priests and even bishops are hearing confessions in private homes throughout the capital.

Very limited numbers of the faithful are being served in this manner, but even the scant attendance with possibly limited remuneration to the priests, is serving to a degree to offset the effect of the religious laws.

Propaganda in behalf of the various Catholic organizations and in support of the economic boycott, is being carried on by means of circulars distributed by hand and secretly to the faithful.

CAPSIZED BOAT IS BELIEVED TO SHOW SAILORS ARE DEAD

Radio Reports From Vessel Ask Help—No Trace Found

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—A capsized lifeboat tossed in a stormy sea sighted by the Dutch steamship Den Haag early today may tell the story of the fate of the crew of the British freighter Loyal Citizen.

The Den Haag reported to the Independent Wireless Co., here that it had sighted the life boat apparently from the Loyal Citizen in the approximate position where the Citizen was abandoned and believed to have gone down late yesterday.

This word increased fears that the crew forced to leave the ship in small boats may have been lost when their frail craft was unable to cope with the heavy seas.

Messages begging for aid were received from the ship. Then came word that the crew was ready to take to lifeboats. That was all from the Loyal Citizen.

Several hours later the British steamer, Sirte, which had picked up the calls radioed that it had gone to the position given by the Loyal Citizen and had found no trace of her.

It was pointed out by operators at the Independent Wireless Co., where the distress calls were received, that the ship probably would have sent more messages if it had not foundered.

Keeping afloat in life boats in a storm of such intensity as is described as lashing the sea southwest of Bermuda, would be extremely difficult, it was declared.

The Loyal Citizen left Norfolk, September 5, for Cardiff, Wales. She is a 2,794 ton freighter. It belongs to the Loyal Line, a British corporation.

MACKENZIE KING IS WINNER IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Ont., Sept. 15.—Conservative Premier Arthur Meighen and five of his ministers were defeated in Canada's general elections and returns today assured the return to power of the Liberal party led by Mackenzie King.

The conservatives, it appeared today would hold about eighty seats. It had been the hope of Canadians that yesterday's general election would end the balance of power situation in the house but while the conservative defeat was decisive the Liberal victory was not.

Ohio Will Again Lead Mid-West States In Corn Production Is Said

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 15.—Ohio again will lead midwestern states in the production of corn, according to the September corn crop report announced today by C. J. West, Federal Agricultural Statistician, with a 1926 corn crop of 138,000,000 bushels.

With production of 10,000,000 bushels of corn during the past month, Ohio's 1926 crop will be much higher than in Iowa and Illinois, where crops will be below average, West said.

Because of the difficulty in threshing of oats due to heavy rains in central and southwestern Ohio, the production of oats, has been reduced at least one fourth under last year, West said.

Ohio potato crop indications for 1926 are now estimated at 10,822,000 bushels, a slight increase from last year's figures, according to West. The total U. S. potato crop will be 25,000,000 bushels more than last year, but 45,000,000 bushels under average, West said.

The commercial apple crop for Ohio is estimated at 860,000 barrels, as compared with a five year average of 675,000 barrels, the report showed.

Ohio's apple crop will be approximately 9,550,000 bushels as compared with the five year average of 7,150,000 bushels.

West estimated the U. S. commercial crop at 42,000,000 bushels. Ohio's cloverseed crop will be smaller this year due to the reduced acreage and only about half a normal yield per acre while the tobacco and buckwheat crop in the state is average, West found.

WANT NEW HEARING OF PROCEEDINGS TO HALT DEMPSEY BOUT

Attorney For Champ Will File Motion To Be Re-Hard

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 15.—Frank Symmes, attorney representing Jack Dempsey, announced today a new hearing will be sought in the injunction proceedings by the Coliseum Club, of Chicago, in superior court here, seeking to prevent the heavyweight champion from meeting Gene Tunney in Philadelphia, September 22.

An injunction was granted the Coliseum Club, Monday night by Judge Clinton Givans, which forbids Dempsey to fight Tunney. Motion for a re-hearing will be based on a bill of exceptions by attorneys for Dempsey to questions put to witnesses during the first hearing, Symmes said.

While the local court is without jurisdiction over the Philadelphia fight, attorneys for the Coliseum Club, using the Indiana decision as a precedent, are expected to make a move in the Philadelphia courts for a similar injunction later in the week.

FONCK TRIP OVER ATLANTIC HELD UP

ROOSEVELT FIELD, WEST-BURY, L. I., Sept. 15.—Four alien motor cars were today for an epoch making flight; three powerful motors were delicately tuned and the weather was perfect—yet the New York to Paris flight of the giant Sikorsky airplane S-35 was postponed.

The cause of the delay came in messages from ocean liners far out in the Atlantic and from land stations in the New Foundland coast. The messages reported rainy weather 300 miles east of the Grand Banks, low visibility and freshening wind.

The S-35, in which Capt. Rene Fonck and his brother associates planned to span the Atlantic without a stop was forced to remain in its shed. The ship, measuring 101 feet from wing tip to wing tip was wheeled out at midnight and the motors started but soon the mechanics ran it back to await more favorable weather.

TESTIMONY IN FRAUD TRIAL LEADS THROUGH WAR SCENES

Buchner Again Questions Merton Regarding Agreement About Securities Held By Swiss Company

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Testimony in the Miller-Daugherty conspiracy trial again today led the court into European counting rooms with a touch of war thrown in, as U. S. Attorney Emory D. Buckner delved into the financial dealings through which the Swiss Metal Securities Co., came to hold stock of the American Metal Co.

It was that stock which Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian and Harry M. Daugherty former attorney general are alleged have returned to the company through a conspiracy which involved the payment by Richard Merton of Frankfurt, Germany of a $441,000 "communication."

Buckner questioned Merton, regarding the agreement the Merton interests entered with the Securities Co., under which the Mertons guaranteed against depreciation of the securities of their enterprises which the Swiss company held.

It was Buckner's apparent purpose to bring out that the agreement really was a guarantee against depreciation of the German mark and that it was not of such a nature as to affect bona fide ownership of the American Metal assets—the assets worth $7,000,000 which the alien property custodian seized when this country entered the war.

BLAST BLOCKS TUBE UNDER RIVER WHILE MEN WERE WORKING

Rescue Crews Start From Both Ends Toward Victims

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 15.—Eight workmen were trapped by an explosion in the new water tunnel, nearing completion here today. The tunnel which extends under the Missouri River was blocked by the explosion and rescue workers were working from both ends of the passage in an effort to reach the men.

The tunnel lies 300 feet beneath the surface of the river and connects the waterworks plant in North Kansas City with water mains here.

Those in charge of rescue work said the supply of air in the tunnel would be exhausted within a short time.

So far it has been impossible to communicate with the men.

They were concreting the interior of the tunnel when the blast occurred.

COST HIM FINE TO SOBER IN XENIA

T. J. Murphy, colored, 702 E. Eighth St., Springfield, will pay $25 and costs for coming to Xenia drunk.

Murphy was arrested by Patrolman Fred Jones at the home of James Watt, E. Third St., Tuesday morning.

"I don't know how I got here—last I remember I was in Springfield," Murphy told police.

Police said that Murphy attended the trial of Homer Jamieson on a bootlegging charge in police court here Monday. After the trial he took Jamieson to Springfield, evidently for the purpose of drowning the latter's sorrow over the $1000 fine which he paid the city. They returned to Xenia sometime during the night, but Murphy didn't know who drove the car.

When an auto mechanic went to the Watt home to repair a car Tuesday morning in answer to a call, he found Murphy at the wheel and refusing to move. Later Murphy was arrested in Watt's house.

BELIEVE AMERICAN KIDNAPED IS DEAD

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Sept. 15.—While troops continued today to search for Jacob Rosenthal, wealthy American kidnapped Sunday, in the face of threats of the kidnappers that they would kill him if they were pursued, serious fears that he was dead or is dying obtained here.

Rosenthal's age—62—his poor health, the high altitude of the bandits stronghold and the chilling rains which have fallen over the area where he is held, all contribute to the anxiety.

Rosenthal, retired business man of Woodmere, L. I., was without an overcoat when he was seized from a party of Americans returning to Mexico City from Guernavaca, a resort city.

METHODS OF SIDNEY ROBBERS SIMILAR TO XENIA THEFTS

were used by thieves who operated in Xenia last spring, when the Hutchison and Gibney and Jobe stores were burglarized.

The Sidney robbers unscrewed the lock on the door, replaced it after they had entered and evaded the watchman. The burglary was not discovered until one of the proprietors went to the store Sunday morning. A reward of $100 has been offered for recovery of the goods or apprehension of the thieves.

LOSES FAITH WHEN FINED IN COURT

LORAIN, O., Sept. 15.—Kenneth Suggs, colored, "man about town" lost his faith in God today.

Arraigned in municipal court on a charge of possession of liquor, he promised to join a church, pray daily and swear off booze if the judge would let him off easy.

Judge J. F. Strenick turned down the plea for mercy and fined Suggs $200, advising Suggs to pray in jail.

"Oh, no, judge. There'll be no praying in that case. What the hell is the use of praying in jail. I have no faith in God when it costs $200 for a pint of liquor."

BEAUTIFICATION OF WATERWORKS TRACT DISCUSSED AT MEET

The site of the old DeWine mill north of Old Town will eventually become a beauty spot, according to plans made by the city which recently acquired about an acre and a half of land between the city waterworks station and the Springfield Pike.

Debris of the old mill, which burned a few years ago, and which has been an eyesore, is being removed, and before fall weather sets in the ground will be graded and ready for planting of shrubbery next spring.

City Auditor T. H. Zell, head of the municipal water plant, who has made a thing of beauty of the water works grounds, will have charge of the beautification of the newly acquired plot. Instead of the unsightly mill ruins which marred the appearance of the city property, a beautiful lawn will eventually sweep out to the pike.

Plans for the beautification of the plot were discussed when Auditor and Mrs. Zell entertained city officials and employees at a picnic supper on the grounds Tuesday evening.

SCARBOROUGH WILL LEAVES ONLY SMALL ESTATE FOR WIDOW

Dr. W. S. Scarborough, former president of Wilberforce University, who died last week, left a small estate, his will, which was admitted to probate Tuesday, discloses.

Real estate valued at $2,500 and personal property at $300, consisting of a library, is the only property listed. The estate is left to the widow, Mrs. Sarah C. Scarborough and in the event of her death the will dictates that it is to be divided equally among her four grand-children: William F. Harry I., Edna M., and Louis H. Grant. A watch and chain and onyx ring were left to William F. Grant under those terms. The will recites that disposition of books, manuscripts and pictures is left absolutely to the widow who is aware of the testator's wishes in that regard, or to William F. Grant. Mrs. Scarborough was appointed executor.

Blaine Newsome was appointed administrator of the estate of Frank Cousins. Bond $1000.

LIBRARY PROPOSAL APPROVED BY COURT FOR NOVEMBER VOTE

The proposal to establish a county library district in Greene County sponsored and backed by the Greene County library board, will go before the voters at the November election.

This was assured Tuesday afternoon when Judge S. C. Wright approved the petition and certified the matter to the County Board of elections.

The petition circulated throughout the county bore 3,949 signatures, 900 more than the twenty-five per cent of the electorate, required by law. The proposition includes the entire county with the exception of Cedarville and Sugarcreek Townships, which have been receiving county library service since July, 1923, by contract with the county commissioners, a special levy for the purpose being made in those townships.

The library board is seeking by establishment of a county library district to widen the scope and usefulness of the library, through a book wagon to visit all parts of the county not now directly reached, and other means.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

Many criticisms of the primary election method of choosing candidates for public office have been heard recently. A campaign to change the state constitution and return most of the way to the party convention plan is under way and more criticism of the primary will be heard.

Yet the primary election in August gave to the Republicans of the state, out of a large field of candidates, a ticket fully representative of the political thought of the party, a ticket that will compare more than favorably with the product of conventions in the past, a ticket with a positive appeal to the voters of the state.

At the head of the ticket, the nominee for governor, is Myers Y. Cooper, who has climbed the ladder from farm boy to a place in the world of business, a man of ample experience and demonstrated ability, who knows life all along the path. His quality has been shown in competition with the best talent met and he has won leadership in all the varied lines of his activities.

The candidate for lieutenant governor, James O. Mills, is a man, whose capabilities have been made more plain in the enterprises he has founded, managed, developed and made notably successful. Every other candidate on the state ticket has had public service in the past and is prepared to serve the public well again.

The fact that Edward C. Turner of Columbus is on the ticket as the party candidate for attorney general will be helpful to the party and the ticket in a large way. All over the state the people know his courage, honor and ability, shown in public service, private and professional life. He has been a faithful, vigilant, high-minded public servant and will be again.

Senator Frank B. Willis, who was overwhelmingly re-nominated in a field of many contenders, adds to the ticket the strength of a worthy life, marked by splendid services to his state and country. His close relations with and capable support of President Coolidge and his policies have been valuable in the past and will be more valuable in the future.

All over Ohio the Coolidge policies are popular, the Coolidge sentiment strong and militant. The harmony of the state organization and candidates with the administration policies will be a factor of importance in the election, a distinct advantage to the Republicans in the campaign.—Ohio State Journal.

IMMIGRATION CHANGES

It was not generally expected that immigration for the fiscal year just closed would be higher than that of the preceding year, for the many stories concerning the effects of the new restriction act have fostered an opposite belief. The increase, however, is but slight, and it partly is owing to the declining emigration of aliens from the United States.

An analysis made by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that 304,488 aliens came into the country, as against 294,314 in the previous year, while only 76,992 aliens, 17 percent less than in 1924-25, left the United States, leaving a net gain in population of 247,496, which is 64 percent less than the net immigration during the fiscal year 1923-24, the last before the restriction act went into effect.

Those countries which are allowed certain quotas practically filled them, sending 95.6 percent of the quota, as against 88.6 the year before. The fact that the quotas were not entirely filled does not mean there are not long waiting lists, it is pointed out, because, in fact, many aliens were rejected upon inspection. It is notable that Germany and Italy, in contrast to the previous year, came very close to sending over all of the settlers allowed, while immigration from Great Britain fell off and was 4000 short of the quota.

A year ago more alien common labor left this country than came in, and this year it was the other way about. Skilled labor came in in greater numbers, and farmers and farm labor fell off. Canada and Mexico furnish the bulk of our immigration, neither country being subject to the quota restriction. The numbers to come from Mexico are increasing, while those from Canada are declining.

The report shows that the quota restriction machinery is working more efficiently, and there is a turn in the tide of labor migration.

A NEW "DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA"

Australia has just set aside an area of 900 square miles to be used for a new federal capital. A unique feature of the proceedings however, is that in accepting the grant it was stipulated that intoxicating liquors should never be manufactured, sold or consumed within the confines of the district. Australia has been studying the effect of the prohibition amendment in the United States and is convinced that it is a good thing. While it has not as yet been possible to make all Australia dry, great headway is being made in that direction.

The specific prohibition of the use of intoxicating liquors in the new capital will not have any tendency to cause certain of America's congressmen to migrate to that country in the hope of being elected to the Australian parliament. Neither will it be any inducement to a certain class of politicians to ask for appointment to the consular service in the Australian capital. But the Australian government is not bidding for that kind of men.

WHEN IS CHURCH NOT A CHURCH

In common with all other states, the state of California exempts all church property used exclusively for religious purposes from taxation. The First Baptist church is San Jose has always enjoyed this exemption until this present year, when its trustees were surprised to receive a notice that they owed the county $1800 in taxes for the current year. Investigation revealed that because they had erected a broadcasting station in the church, a tower at either corner and the studio in one of the rooms of the church, it had become commercial property and subject to taxation. The payment of the tax is being protested, but the taxing authorities claim that since there is a charge of $75 per hour for the use of the broadcasting service, it is not purely religious.

POMPEY'S PILLAR

In the beautiful glen at Yellow Springs is Pompey's Pillar, of which Professor Arton has written the brief following description:

"It consists of a mass of native limestone rock, fifteen to twenty feet in height, which has been left as we find it, through the mass of erosive agencies in the past.

"The large mass which makes the top of the column is a part of the Caprock of the cliffs and the column itself consists of a number of courses of the building stone of the same series. All of it is Niagara limestone.

"The formation of the column must date back for many hundreds and probably for many thousands of years.

"It is now slowly wasting through the action of the atmosphere, but is likely enough to remain about as it is for many centuries to come, unless disturbed by human agency."

Just Folks

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

THE TRICKSTERS

Joe was slick, with many a trick
He trimmed the passer-by.
Whenever he could, for coal and wood

He put his prices high,
And if he thought you wouldn't look
A little off the weight he took.

Joe used to harp on methods sharp
"Let buyers all beware!"
He'd often say, "Whenever they
Come selling I take care,
If I get cheated in the game
I only have myself to blame."

Joe knew a lot, but he forgot
That buyers do beware.
That life is long, and those you wrong

Soon learn to trade elsewhere,
That every shady dollar made
Will cost you ten in future trade.

Joe tricked a few as smart men do,
And chuckled as they will,
But came the day to Joe's dismay
When empty was his till.
He watched his trade to others go,
The buyers had outsmarted Joe.

Boy, when you meet a chance to cheat
Refuse that way to gain.
The trickster's art is never smart,
The cunning merchants always fall.
The cleverest crooks are all in jail.

SOCIALISTS FAIL

The time for filing additional names expired at midnight.

THE GOOFER ATTEMPTS TO COME TO THE INTERROGATION POINT

Jay V. Jay

"Mitzi, I want to ask you something, something personal" pleads the Goof. Right in the midst of Des Moines, Iowa, where they are visiting. "That," points out Mitzi reading the sign, "is the Coliseum, you know." Which is hardly encouraging conversation. The gesture however brings attention to the pleated sleeve which joins the odd yoke of her dress.

The Goof, making a fresh start. "I hope you will take your time to decide but I want to ask you something that will affect my whole..." "Look quickly," interrupts Mitzi again, "there's another view of the same building." The Goof prefers to look at Mitzi's felt hat painted in strange figures.

"Now, Mitzi, I hope not to bother you," commences the Goof attempting to continue this serious tete-a-tete when along comes Pretty Polly. There is such a restraint in the atmosphere that Polly rolls her blue eyes knowingly and makes it worse by shaking her fingers and saying: "What are you two stopping in front of the Court House for? I've been inside and there are miles of people applying for marriage licenses." The Goof blushes unbearably. Mitzi changes the subject by admiring Polly's two piece suit with pleated ruffles down the front and on the sleeves.

RISKS FOR OTHERS

God has put into the human heart not only a strong desire to preserve itself, but a desire to preserve the life of others. This is what knits the human race and makes us feel kindly toward all men.

The swimmer sees a human being in distress. Without asking questions, he plunges into the water, forgetting all danger to himself, and seeks only to save another. Often he loses his own life in such an attempt.

The inventor looks ahead. I know of a man who so burnt himself by experiments with the X-ray that he had to have one of his hands removed. But he mended complaint.

When a man gives of his life to his art or his desire to know through experimenting, he thinks only of success. He is willing to pay all costs—even to the giving of his life.

The newspaper told the other day of the invention of a parachute which is hitched to an airplane. By the proper handling in the air it allows an aviator to descend with a disabled machine to the earth in perfect safety. The engine alone may go back on him and yet both airplane and man may come to the ground gently. A long step ahead—which makes flying safer after the automobile.

History is filled with the names of those who willingly risked for others.

We rise only as we help others to rise.

We can always afford to risk for someone else. We never know when we may be called upon. But that doesn't matter.

REDS TAKE LEAD IN NATIONAL RACE

Six or eight weeks ago, Carl Mays, artist of the subway ball, heard Manager Jack Hendricks of the Reds say: "I'll never start Carl again."

That was after the underhand tosser had pitched miserable baseball in several starts and appeared to be decidedly off color. Hendricks was distinctly peeved but the threat seemed to work wonders with Mays.

On his next appearance he pitched brilliantly and he has easily won the majority of his starts since then. Tuesday he ran his string of victories to nineteen against twelve defeats when he let Brooklyn down with five hits, permitted his mates to win 7 to 1 and also enabled them to grab an undisputed hold on first place in the hot National League race.

By reason of an idle afternoon the St. Louis Cardinals dropped a half game in the race and lost first position which they had so confidently claimed as their very own for several days. In the meantime the Pittsburgh Pirates showed themselves to be still a menace when they trounced the Giants and advanced within a game of the Cards and a game and one-half of the Reds to make the race the warmest since the senior circuit came into existence.

Eppa Rixey, who blanked the Robins, was sent back after them Wednesday by Hendricks while Jesse Barnes, a tough egg for the leaders to crack, was slated to work for Brooklyn. Rixey asked for the chance to pitch in spite of only one day of rest which exemplifies the kind of spirit that ought to help the Reds win the pennant. Jackie May, injured Labor Day, will join the team at New York Friday and will be ready to work in that series if called on.

The Cardinals played two games with Philadelphia Wednesday and if they find the hand-box field to their liking, may take both games from the lowly last placers. In this event they can tie the Reds even if Cincinnati wins and if the Reds lose the Cards can regain their half-game lead. The Phillies beat the tough Chicago Cubs Tuesday and may be prime to push St.

Louis further down the ladder. The Cards have six games with the Phils, winding up with another doubleheader Saturday. The Reds go to New York for a series with the Giants after Wednesday's game across the bridge.

Manager Hendricks has been advised that the Red Club has purchased Shortstop Pittenger from the Louisville American Association club to join the team next spring. Pittenger will fight it out for the short field with Horace Ford. He was formerly with the Cubs.

DEMPSEY ROUTINE UNDECIDED FOR DAY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 15.—Jack Dempsey's routine for today was a questionable matter when he arose this morning after a good night's sleep at Kerry Cottage.
The secrecy imposed on the camp probably will be lifted to allow newspapermen to witness today's workout. Otherwise the champion was inclined to consider the day his usual Wednesday one of rest.

BAR BANTAM CHAMP FROM ILLINOIS FOR LIFE; BOUT HALTED

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—To halt an alleged gambling coup, the Illinois Boxing Commission has called off the bantam weight championship fight between Charlie Phil Rosenberg, New York and Bud Taylor, Terra Haute, Ind., scheduled for tomorrow night, has barred champion Rosenberg and his manager, Harry Seal for life in Illinois rings and has awarded the championship to Taylor.

Rosenberg had previously been barred from rings in New York and California, following reports of unethical conduct.
The Rosenberg-Taylor bout, scheduled for tomorrow night was called off following reports that New York gamblers had descended in Chicago with heavy bets to place on Champion Rosenberg when Taylor had earlier been a top-heavy favorite.
The Illinois Boxing Commission gave as the official reason for the action:
"Segal and Rosenberg ignored our rules pertaining to forfeits after the commission had granted several days grace and further because of the injection of political and other influences pertaining to our appointment of a referee. Segal and Rosenberg, in our opinion are not the caliber of men who belong in boxing."

According to Chairman O. W. Huncke, of the Illinois commission forfeits should have been posted with the signing of a contract on July 24. The forfeit was to have been $12,500.
Segal held out his forfeit in an effort to see that a referee would be appointed who was acceptable to him, it was reported. The commission, however, heard through underground channels that gamblers were awaiting the appointment of a referee to lay a half million dollars on Rosenberg.
The gamblers, it was said, wanted to be sure that the decision would not be too unfair to Rosenberg.

STROUDSBURG, Pa., Sept. 15.—Gene Tunney was due back in the ring today for a brief sparring session with his partners among whom will be Jimmy Delaney, a newcomer.
Gene was planning his regular road jaunt today before his real workout.
Tunney has been noticeably languid for the past few days but that condition is attributed by his trainer Lou Fink to the expected reaction at this time.

May Christie's "The Girl Who Dared" Starts Today

Generous Installment Opens New Novel Today—
—Story of Mary Forrest Expected To Exceed
"The Gilded Rose" In Popularity

Chapter 1 ADVENTURE

Amid the incessant hum of twenty typewriters in one of Atlanta's busiest offices, the nimble fingers of Miss Mary Forrest clicked with the utmost speed and accuracy upon the keys of her machine.

Mary was twenty-five. Brisk. Capable. Not pretty with a novel, ethereal prettiness. Yet with a definite attractiveness of her own.

Her hair was unshorn, dark brown, parted in the middle, its becoming neatness quite a pleasing contrast to the many pert and shingled coiffures all about. Her clear skin—a little pallid through seven years of indoor office work—was quite devoid of all those marvellous "aids" you read about in advertising columns, while her deep set, wise young eyes gazed forth from lashes that were just as nature had intended them to be.

In the workmanlike blue serge fashioned by the same nimble fingers that now clicked so fast and furiously upon the machine, the white cuffs camouflaged by paper ones (to save the laundry), Miss Mary Forrest looked a cool and pleasing picture—"just the sort of girl one would like one's brother to marry"—as a fellow-worker had described her.

But—tell it softly, and let no one in the office hear it!—in her seven years of work no one had proposed to Mary Forrest, unless you count the young theological student at the boarding house who had sticking out teeth and dyspepsia.

Today was Mary's birthday. The twenty-fifth milestone "I herewith enter the ranks of old maids," whimsically she told herself, forgetting that the United States isn't France and that on her twenty-fifth anniversary an American girl has at least a whole decade of fun in front of her and doesn't "coif Saint Catherine!" . . . no, not by a long way either, let me tell you.

It was nearing six o'clock on this late December day and outside the Public Stenographers' office where Mary worked, the drizzle lay damp and cold on the pavements. For the capital of Georgia can be as disagreeable in winter as the capital of Connecticut.

"Awful night!" volunteered Mary's neighbor, a pretty pert and yellow headed miss, above the din of the machines. "My leave's meeting me at Five Points to take me out to supper and the movies. It's raining and here I am with my Sunday dress on and a brand new hat and no umbrella! Just my rotten luck!"

Now this same "beau" had once shown a decided interest in Miss Mary Forrest. His home was in the same northside section where she lodged. The pair frequently caught the same street car in the mornings and it was not long before an acquaintance had been struck up.

Yes, life had had a sort of thrill to it these days.

But Mary's natural reserve had chilled him rather. She was too serious by far, thought he. Read stuffy books and wanted to discuss them. Didn't laugh at his priceless jokes in the hearty way that pretty yellow-headed little Janey did. Didn't care over much for theater or movies. Was stand-offish too, when it came to a good night kiss.

But Janey appreciated him and his good clothes and his good looks. So why worry? Life was short and a fellow liked a little fun and "plop!"

Mary looked at Janey with a sudden sharp contraction of the heart. Then, with her quick generosity, she said:

"You can have my umbrella. I'm wearing nothing that will spoil."

"Oh, I couldn't really. It's far too good of you. You're always doing something for other people."

"Nonsense!" The capable young hands clicked resolutely upon the keys. "I've no good clothes—no engagement. . . . no best beau. So the umbrella's yours, and don't thank me for it."

At six the noise of the machines was silenced. Every girl relaxed. "Call from the Ardmore Hotel for a young lady to take two hours dictation," announced the "boss."

Then, turning the leaves of a notebook rapidly: "Your turn, Miss Janey. I see you haven't done over time in the last two months. Come now, no putting. Fair play, please."

Two large, pathetic tears welled to the shallow orbs of Janey. Her baby mouth trembled with disappointment.

"I simply can't! I've got an important appointment. I—"

"Come, come now. No 'can't's' here. The only 'can't' we ever recognize is the one we can't employ a girl who doesn't take her turn and turn about."

Only for the fraction of a second did Mary Forrest hesitate. Janey's "beau" who once so nearly had been hers. . . .

Even if it was her birthday, no treat lay in store for her tonight! "Janey's dead tired. I'll go instead. I'd quite enjoy it." She contrived a smile that was almost like the real thing, even though her heart ached with loneliness and her body with fatigue.

The employer hesitated. He was fair, but he was harassed. The reputation of his establishment must be maintained. Mary Forrest's work was so dependable, in antithesis to the yellow damsel's efforts.

"It's for a writer. Fussy as can be. He sent the last girl back. And I know Miss Janey's spelling isn't—" that applies to me exactly, for I make a good salary"—her chin went up with a little air of pride that had a sort of pathos in it—"and don't think I'm complaining. I get thirty dollars a week. That isn't at all bad, when you think of the unemployed, and the way men's pay has been cut down." And then she added, wistfully, "But life could be so enchanting if I just had a little more—for trips and things—you understand."

He shot a quizzical look at her ingenuous young face. It was ingenuous, he decided. She continued earnestly:

"Though I love the South—I get a kind of 'wanderlust.' She flushed over the use of the foreign word, hoping he wouldn't think that she was trying to impress him. "How I'd adore to travel! The longing almost hurts, sometimes. Often in the lunch-hour, I run into one of the hotels and get all their travel leaflets. At nights, I read them over and over, and bind them into books. And I fall asleep weaving romances about these places—"

She broke off, feeling that she had cheapened herself by confessing far too much.

"Please go on. I'm awfully interested, being an incurable rover myself. Not that I ever made any real money through my roving." The kind eyes twinkled. "Can't I hear about the romances, please? Don't shut me out."

Although the words were light, the tone was deferential and held no hint of mockery. He was treating her as he might treat a sister he respected.

"stated, then she said

evasively: "stupid dreams in a practical life, that's all. I don't suppose they ever will come true but they lighten the dull days a little. So they serve their purpose."

The man opposite her was touched. He liked her little air of dignity so quaintly mingled with her frankness. "Why don't you make the dreams come true? You're young, intelligent—and I am sure—extremely capable. Why wait for opportunity to come knocking?"

She looked at the attractive stranger dubiously, as though wondering if he were making fun of her. Then, with a little smile that lit her whole face, up, so shy and sweet it was, she answered:

"How odd that you said that, when it's just what I've been thinking all day long today! You see someone. . . . I think it was an English writer. . . . says that one's birthday should be landmarks where one does a sort of mental stock-taking, to see how far one has advanced along the road. He says it would save such a lot of misery and disappointment if one were really sure of one's goal and progress, while there's time enough. Women so often do their stock-taking too late."

The young man opposite her suppressed a smile.

"Go on, please. You have years ahead of you."

"Oh, no. That's just the trouble." Her frank eyes looked into his. "I'm twenty-five. I've been seven years holding different jobs. And I'm in a groove. Another year or two of it and I'm done for. I'm afraid to budge, and yet I hate myself for hesitating. Dreadful, isn't it?" Again the little wistful smile. "There must be lots of girls like me—"

"I'm sure there aren't many half as cool and plucky," he countered, thrust impulsively, "nor so generous as you've proved yourself to be tonight, in volunteering to work overtime, when you ought to be having a celebration that's due to every pretty girl upon her birthday."

Mary Forrest flushed. Had her ears deceived her, or had this wonderfully attractive stranger really called her "pretty?"

"How did you know it was my birthday?"

"You let it slip just now—the 'stock-taking,' you remember?"

She gave a little laugh that was as clear and tinkling as a brook. The melodious sound struck pleasantly upon his ears, in contrast to another girl—an infinitely prettier girl perhaps—whose laugh was just a shade too loud.

"I have talked too much," said Mary Forrest gently. "Please forgive me, but you've been so kind." She glanced at the cheap metal watch on the leather strap that bound her wrist, and gave a little cry of dismay. "Good gracious! It's a quarter to seven and I'm already due at the Ardmore!" She jumped up hastily.

"Don't be anxious. I'll drop you in a taxi."

Mary shook her head. "I couldn't think of putting you to the expense. I've been trouble enough. Please let me pay my own check."

Courteously he thrust her hand away from the bill that lay beside his plate.

"The check and the pleasure are all mine," he said quite formally. Then, turning to the waitress and paying her, he added, "Please give the lady's coat a brush. The mud is dry."

In a few moments they were in a taxicab and speeding along Peachtree Street.

"It's far too good of you to bother—" Mary was protesting. How dreadful to have run this Good Samaritan into such expense when she could see by his clothes that he couldn't afford it even if he was a gentleman and perfectly charming!

"I was going this way anyhow." The cab was held up in the cross-traffic and a dilapidated flower-girl thrust a great spray of lilies-of-the-valley through the window.

"I haven't sold a flower today, sir. Buy them for the pretty lady. Only fifty cents, sir."

He took the sheaf of lilies in one hand, and got out a bill. "You can keep the change for luck," he smiled at the vendor as the taxi jerked forward and away. Then he dropped the flowers in

The three men arrested with selling poisonous impure and unlabeled canned food in violation of the state pure food laws are Charles Klotz, John S. Perry and Bert Williams. Klotz and Perry are alleged to have procured canned food nineteen years old.

Agricultural department chemists who examined the food said it was poisonous enough to kill.

CAPSIZED BOAT IS BELIEVED TO SHOW SAILORS ARE DEAD

Radio Reports From Vessel Ask Help—No Trace Found

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—A capsized lifeboat tossed in a stormy sea sighted by the Dutch steamship Den Haag early today may tell the story of the fate of the crew of the British freighter Loyal Citizen.

The Den Haag reported to the Independent Wireless Co., here that it had sighted the life boat apparently from the Loyal Citizen in the approximate position where the Citizen was abandoned and believed to have gone down late yesterday.

This word increased fears that the crew forced to leave the ship in small boats may have been lost when their frail craft was unable to cope with the heavy seas.

Messages begging for aid were received from the ship. Then came word that the crew was ready to take to lifeboats. That was all from the Loyal Citizen.

Several hours later the British steamer, Sirio, which had picked up the calls radioed that it had gone to the position given by the Loyal Citizen and had found no trace of her.

It was pointed out by operators at the Independent Wireless Co., where the distress calls were received, that the ship probably would have sent more messages if it had not foundered.

Keeping afloat in life boats in a storm of such intensity as is described as lashing the sea southwest of Bermuda, would be extremely difficult, it was declared.

The Loyal Citizen left Norfolk, September 5, for Cardiff, Wales. She is a 2,794 ton freighter. It belongs to the Loyal Line, a British corporation.

CATHOLICS HOLD RITES IN HOMES MACKENZIE KING IS WINNER IN CANADA

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15.—Observance of religious ceremonies in private homes, but with semi-public attendance, has begun as a result of the conflict between Church and state. Many Priests and even Bishops are hearing confessions in private homes throughout the capital.

Very limited numbers of the faithful are being served in this manner, but even the scant attendance with possibly limited remuneration to the priests, is serving to a degree to offset the effects of the religious laws.

Propaganda in behalf of the various Catholic organizations and in support of the economic boycott, is being carried on by means of circulars distributed by hand and secretly to the faithful.

GENEROUS INSTALLMENT NOVEL, "GIRL WHO DARED" IN TODAY'S PAPER

"The Girl Who Dared," May Christie's new novel, begins today on page eight of this paper.

A generous opening installment inaugurates the new story from the pen of the writer who gained such a wide field of readers with her first story for this paper, "The Gilded Rose," which ended yesterday.

Critics believe Miss Christie has handled an intriguing plot in a masterful manner in the production of her new story. The quality of this new novel proves that Miss Christie is not only a capable artist of the pen but that she

Ohio Will Again Lead Mid-West States In Corn Production Is Said

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 15.—Ohio again will lead midwestern states in the production of corn, according to the September corn crop report announced today by C. J. West, Federal Agricultural Statistician, with a 1926 corn crop of 138,000,000 bushels.

With production of 10,000,000 bushels of corn during the past month, Ohio's 1926 crop will be much higher than in Iowa and Illinois, where crops will be below average, West said.

Because of the difficulty in threshing of oats due to heavy rains in central and southwestern Ohio, the production of oats, has been reduced at least one fourth under last year, West said.

Ohio potato crop indications for 1926 are now estimated at 10,822,000 bushels, a slight increase from last year's figures, according to West. The total U. S. potato crop will be 25,000,000 bushels more than last year, but 45,000,000 bushels under average, West said.

The commercial apple crop for Ohio is estimated at 860,000 barrels, as compared with a five year average of 675,000 barrels, the report showed.

Ohio's apple crop will be approximately 9,550,000 bushels as compared with the five year average of 7,150,000 bushels.

West estimated the U. S. Commercial crop at 42,000,000 bushels. Ohio's cloverseed crop will be smaller this year due to the reduced acreage and only about half a normal yield per acre while the tobacco and buckwheat crop in the state is average, West found.

WANT NEW HEARING OF PROCEEDINGS TO HALT DEMPSEY BOUT

Attorney For Champ Will File Motion To Be Re-Heard

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 15.—Frank Symmes, attorney representing Jack Dempsey, announced today a new hearing will be sought in the injunction proceedings by the Coliseum Club, of Chicago, in superior court here, seeking to prevent the heavyweight champion from meeting Gene Tunney in Philadelphia, September 23.

An injunction was granted the Coliseum Club, Monday night by Judge Clinton Givans, which forbids Dempsey to fight Tunney. Motion for a re-hearing will be based on a bill of exceptions by attorneys for Dempsey to questions put to witnesses during the first hearing, Symmes said.

While the local court is without jurisdiction over the Philadelphia fight, attorneys for the Coliseum Club, using the Indiana decision as a precedent, are expected to make a move in the Philadelphia courts for a similar injunction later in the week.

FONCK TRIP OVER ATLANTIC HELD UP

ROOSEVELT FIELD, WEST-BURY, L. I., Sept. 15.—Four airmen were ready today for an epoch making flight; three powerful motors were delicately tuned and the weather was perfect—yet the New York to Paris flight of the giant Sikorsky airplane S-35 was postponed.

The cause of the delay came in messages from ocean liners far out in the Atlantic and from land stations in the New Foundland coast. The messages reported rainy weather 300 miles east of the Grand Banks, low visibility and freshening wind.

The S-35, in which Capt. Rene Fonck and his brother associates planned to span the Atlantic without a stop was forced to remain in its slip. The ship, measuring 101 feet from wing tip to wing tip was wheeled out at midnight and the motors started but soon the mechanics ran it back to await more favorable weather.

TESTIMONY IN FRAUD TRIAL LEADS THROUGH WAR SCENES

Buchner Again Questions Merton Regarding Agreement About Securities Held By Swiss Company

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Testimony in the Miller-Daugherty conspiracy trial again today led the court into European counting rooms with a touch of war thrown in, as U. S. Attorney Emory D. Buckner delved into the financial dealings through which the Swiss Metal Securities Co., came to hold stock of the American Metal Co.

It was that stock which Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian and Harry M. Daugherty former attorney general are alleged to have returned to the company through a conspiracy which involved the payment by Richard Merton of Frankfurt, Germany of a $441,000 "communication."

Buckner questioned Merton, regarding the agreement the Merton interests entered with the Securities Co., under which the Mertons guaranteed against depreciation of the securities of their enterprises which the Swiss company held.

It was Buckner's apparent purpose to bring out that the agreement really was a guarantee against depreciation of the German mark and that it was not of such a nature as to affect bona-fide ownership of the American Metal assets—the assets worth $7,000,000 which the alien property custodian seized when this country entered the war.

BLAST BLOCKS TUBE UNDER RIVER WHILE MEN WERE WORKING

Rescue Crews Start From Both Ends Toward Victims

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 15.—Eight workmen were trapped by an explosion in the new water tunnel, nearing completion here today. The tunnel which extends under the Missouri River was blocked by the explosion and rescue workers were working from both ends of the passage in an effort to reach the men.

The tunnel lies 300 feet beneath the surface of the river and connects the waterworks plant in North Kansas City with water mains here.

Murphy in charge of rescue work said the supply of air in the tunnel would be exhausted within a short time.

So far it has been impossible to communicate with the men.

They were concreting the interior of the tunnel when the blast occurred.

COST HIM FINE TO SOBER IN XENIA

T. J. Murphy, colored, 702 E. Eighth St., Springfield, will pay $25 and costs for coming to Xenia drunk.

Murphy was arrested by Patrolman Fred Jones at the home of James Watt, E. Third St., Tuesday morning.

"I don't know how I got here—last I remember I was in Springfield," Murphy told police.

Police say that Murphy attended the trial of Homer Jamieson on a bootlegging charge in police court here Monday. After the trial he took Jamieson to Springfield, evidently for the purpose of drowning the latter's sorrow over the $1000 fine which he paid the city. They returned to Xenia sometime during the night, but Murphy didn't know who drove the car.

When an auto mechanic went to the Watt home to repair a car Tuesday morning in answer to a call, he found Murphy at the wheel and refusing to move. Later Murphy was arrested in Watt's house.

BELIEVE AMERICAN KIDNAPED IS DEAD

MEXICO CITY, Mex., Sept. 15.—While troops continued today to search for Jacob Rosenthal, wealthy American kidnaped Sunday, in the face of threats of the kidnapers that they would kill him if they were pursued, serious fears that he was dead or is dying obtained here.

Rosenthal's age—62—his poor health, the high altitude of the bandits stronghold and the chilling rains which have fallen over the area where he is held, all contribute to the anxiety.

Rosenthal, retired business man of Woodmere, L. I., was without an overcoat when he was seized from a party of Americans returning to Mexico City from Guernavaca, a resort city.

METHODS OF SIDNEY ROBBERS SIMILAR TO XENIA THEFTS

Burglars who robbed the department store of William Piper and Sons in Sidney last Saturday night stealing $1500 worth of merchandise, used the same methods that were used by thieves who operated in Xenia last spring, when the Hutchison and Gibney and Jobe stores were burglarized.

The Sidney robbers unscrewed the lock on the door, replaced it after they had entered and evaded the watchman. The burglary was not discovered until one of the proprietors went to the store Sunday morning. A reward of $100 has been offered for recovery of the goods or apprehension of the thieves.

LOSES FAITH WHEN FINED IN COURT

LORAIN, O., Sept. 15.—Kenneth Suggs, colored, "man about town" lost his faith in God today.

Arraigned in municipal court on a charge of possession of liquor, he promised to join a church, pray daily and swear off booze if the judge would let him off easy.

Judge J. F. Strenick turned down the plea for mercy and fined Suggs $200, advising Suggs to pray in jail. "Oh, no, judge. There'll be no praying in that case. What the hell is the use of praying in jail. I have no faith in God when it costs $200 for a pint of liquor."

BEAUTIFICATION OF WATERWORKS TRACT DISCUSSED AT MEET

The site of the old DeWine mill north of Old Town will eventually become a beauty spot, according to plans made by the city which recently acquired about an acre and a half of land between the city waterworks station and the Springfield Pike.

Debris of the old mill, which burned a few years ago, and which has been an eyesore, is being removed, and before fall weather sets in the ground will be graded and ready for planting of shrubbery next Spring.

City Auditor T. H. Zell, head of the municipal water plan, who has made a thing of beauty of the water works grounds, will have charge of the beautification of the newly acquired plot. Instead of the unsightly mill ruins which marred the appearance of the city property, a beautiful lawn will eventually sweep out to the pike.

Plans for the beautification of the plot were discussed when Auditor and Mrs. Zell entertained city officials and employees at a picnic supper on the grounds Tuesday evening.

Arrangements were also made to send a delegate to the twenty-first annual convention of the Ohio branch, National Congress of Parents and Teachers to be held at Marietta, in October. The delegate will be appointed later. No definite plan of work for the coming year was decided upon.

THE REPUBLICAN TICKET

Many criticisms of the primary election method of choosing candidates for public office have been heard recently. A campaign to change the state constitution and return most of the way to the party convention plan is under way and more criticism of the primary will be heard.

Yet the primary election in August gave to the Republicans of the state, out of a large field of candidates, a ticket fully representative of the political thought of the party, a ticket that will compare more than favorably with the product of conventions in the past, a ticket with a positive appeal to the voters of the state.

At the head of the ticket, the nominee for governor, is Myers Y. Cooper, who has climbed the ladder from farm boy to a place in the world of business, a man of ample experience and demonstrated ability, who knows life all along the path. His quality has been shown in competition with the best talent met and he has won leadership in all the varied lines of his activities.

The candidate for lieutenant governor, James O. Mills, is a man, whose capabilities have been made more plain in the enterprises he has founded, managed, developed and made notably successful. Every other candidate on the state ticket has had public service in the past and is prepared to serve the public well again.

The fact that Edward C. Turner of Columbus is on the ticket as the party candidate for attorney general will be helpful to the party and the ticket in a large way. All over the state the people know his courage, honor and ability, shown in public service, private and professional life. He has been a faithful, vigilant, high-minded public servant and will be again.

Senator Frank B. Willis, who was overwhelmingly re-nominated in a field of many contenders, adds to the ticket the strength of a worthy life, marked by splendid services to his state and country. His close relations with and capable support of President Coolidge and his policies have been valuable in the past and will be more valuable in the future.

All over Ohio the Coolidge policies are popular, the Coolidge sentiment strong and militant. The harmony of the state organization and candidates with the administration policies will be a factor of importance in the election, a distinct advantage to the Republicans in the campaign.—Ohio State Journal.

IMMIGRATION CHANGES

It was not generally expected that immigration for the fiscal year just closed would be higher than that of the preceding year, for the many stories concerning the effects of the new restriction act have fostered an opposite belief. The increase, however, is but slight, and it partly is owing to the declining emigration of aliens from the United States.

An analysis made by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that 304,488 aliens came into the country, as against 294,314 in the previous year, while only 76,992 aliens, 17 percent less than in 1924-25, left the United States, leaving a net gain in population of 247,496, which is 64 percent less than the net immigration during the fiscal year 1923-24, the last before the restriction act went into effect.

Those countries which are allowed certain quotas practically filled them, sending 95.6 percent of the quota, as against 88.6 the year before. The fact that the quotas were not entirely filled does not mean there are not long waiting lists, it is pointed out, because, in fact, many aliens were rejected upon inspection. It is notable that Germany and Italy, in contrast to the previous year, came very close to sending over all of the settlers allowed, while immigration from Great Britain fell off and was 4000 short of the quota.

A year ago more alien common labor left this country than came in, and this year it was the other way about. Skilled labor came in in greater numbers, and farmers and farm labor fell off. Canada and Mexico furnish the bulk of our immigration, neither country being subject to the quota restriction. The numbers to come from Mexico are increasing, while those from Canada are declining.

The report shows that the quota restriction machinery is working more efficiently, and there is a turn in the tide of labor migration.

A NEW "DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA"

Australia has just set aside an area of 900 square miles to be used for a new federal capital. A unique feature of the proceedings however, is that in accepting the grant it was stipulated that intoxicating liquors should never be manufactured, sold or consumed within the confines of the district. Australia has been studying the effect of the prohibition amendment in the United States and is convinced that it is a good thing. While it has not as yet been possible to make all Australia dry, great headway is being made in that direction.

The specific prohibition of the use of intoxicating liquors in the new capital will not have any tendency to cause certain of America's congressmen to migrate to that country in the hope of being elected to the Australian parliament. Neither will it be any inducement to a certain class of politicians to ask for appointment to the consular service in the Australian capital. But the Australian government is not bidding for that kind of men.

WHEN IS CHURCH NOT A CHURCH

In common with all other states, the state of California exempts all church property used exclusively for religious purposes from taxation. The First Baptist church is San Jose has always enjoyed this exemption until this present year, when its trustees were surprised to receive a notice that they owed the county $1800 in taxes for the current year. Investigation revealed that because they had erected a broadcasting station in the church, a tower at either corner and the studio in one of the rooms of the church, it had become commercial property and subject to taxation. The payment of the tax is being protested, but the taxing authorities claim that since there is a charge of $75 per hour for the use of the broadcasting service, it is not purely religious.

RISKS FOR OTHERS

God has put into the human heart not only a strong desire to preserve itself, but a desire to preserve the life of others. This is what knits the human race and makes us feel kindly toward all men.

The swimmer sees a human being in distress. Without asking questions, he plunges into the water, forgetting all danger to himself, and seeks only to save another. Often he loses his own life in such an attempt.

The inventor looks ahead. I know of a man who so burnt himself by experiments with the X-ray that he had to have one of his hands removed. But he mends complaint.

When a man gives of his life to his art or his desire to know through experimenting, he thinks only of success. He is willing to pay all costs—even to the giving of his life itself.

The newspaper told the other day of the invention of a parachute which is hitched to an airplane. By the proper handling in the air it allows an aviator to descend with a disabled machine to the earth in perfect safety. The engine alone may go back on him and yet both airplane and man may come to the ground gently. A long step ahead—which makes flying safer for the automobile.

History is filled with the names of those who willingly risked for others.

We rise only as we help others to rise.

We can always afford to risk for someone else. We never know when we may be called upon. But that doesn't matter.

increases. In the afternoon able and instructive addresses were given by different ministers. The Rev. and Mrs. L. L. Gray had the dinner served at the parsonage at the noon hour.

POMPEY'S PILLAR

In the beautiful glen at Yellow Springs is Pompey's Pillar, of which Professor Arton has written the brief following description:

"It consists of a mass of native limestone rock, fifteen to twenty feet in height, which has been left as we find it, through the mass of erosive agencies in the past.

"The large mass which makes the top of the column is a part of the Caprock of the cliffs and the column itself consists of a number of courses of the building stone of the same series. All of it is Niagara limestone.

"The formation of the column must date back for many hundreds and probably for many thousands of years.

"It is now slowly wasting through the action of the atmosphere, but is likely enough to remain about as it is for many centuries to come, unless disturbed by human agency."

THE TRICKSTERS

Joe was sick, with many a trick
He trimmed the passer-by.
Whenever he could, for coal and wood
He put his prices high,
And if he thought you wouldn't look
A little off the weight he took.

Joe used to harp on methods sharp
"Let buyers all beware!"
He'd often say, "Whenever they
Come selling I take care,
If I get cheated in the game
I only have myself to blame."

Joe knew a lot, but he forgot
That buyers do beware,
That life is long, and those you Wrong.

Soon learn to trade elsewhere,
That every shady dollar made
Will cost you ten in future trade.

Joe tricked a few as smart men do,
And chuckled as they will,
But came the day to Joe's dismay
When empty was his till,
He watched his trade to others go,
The buyers had outsmarted Joe.

Boy, when you meet a chance to cheat
Refuse that way to gain.
The trickster's art is never smart,
The cunning merchants always fail.
The cleverest crooks are all in jail.

SOCIALISTS FAIL TO GO ON BALLOTS

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 15.—The Socialist party has failed to qualify to have its ticket printed on the state ballot for the November elections.

The party Monday filed with the Secretary of State a petition nominating a full state ticket but it was learned today that the petition contained only 13,908 names whereas 19,734 are necessary to make it legal.

The time for filing additional names expired at midnight.

—OF—

New York

By Jack O'Donnell

Twenty years ago, if you were a patron of the old Sheephead Bay race track, you may have noticed a bright-face youngster purveying succulent frankfurters. Or, if your memory doesn't go back that far, you may have been at the late lamented old Madison Square Garden one of those nights when the six-day-bicyclists were in action, and seen a mature man with a grim face and foghorn voice yelling, "Red-hot. Get a red hot!" Well, that boy of the Sheephead Bay days and man of Madison Square Garden nights has just proved to the world that New York is still the magic city of which Horatio Alger wrote. A few days ago David Latinberg—for that's the name of the erstwhile purveyor of wienies—paid $275,000 for a block of apartment houses over in Brooklyn.

Our private statistician tells us that if the hot-dogs which those $275,000 represent were laid end to end—No, our private statistician went loco just before he finished figuring just how far they would reach.

Jimmy Walker had been Mayor of this town only a few hours when, to borrow an expression from the gambling fraternity, he "took it on the bean." He had just finished his inaugural address and was on his way up-town. His car was going down the slight incline between Forty-first and Forty-second Streets on the Avenue and had almost reached Forty-second when Tim, the big traffic cop at the world's busiest corner blew his whistle to halt the north-bound traffic. The Mayor's chauffeur glanced out of the corner of his eye at Hizzoner. The look was for advice. The lips of the Mayor moved and the car came to a sudden, four-wheeled brake stop. The "little giant of the Senate" as he was called when leading the minority in the State legislature, probably reiterated the statement he had made a few minutes before, to wit, "The Mayor alone cannot run the whole city government." Tim, the traffic cop, showed the Mayor's chauffeur just what Jimmy meant when he dropped that civic pearl.

Wealthy New Yorkers who have no respect for the Eighteenth Amendment and who drink promiscuously, are taking no chances of being poisoned. They are using guinea-pigs as testers. When they go forth for an evening's revel they take with them in small silver cases four baby guinea-pigs. Before drinking from a new bottle they pour a few drops of the contents into a spoon and give one of the rodents a drink. If the animal does not die within two minutes the booze is considered fit to drink.

So widespread has this custom become among the wealthy of Gotham that one of the smart Fifth Avenue shops carries a line of silver cases just large enough to hold four guinea-pigs. These cases fit into the pockets of evening clothes, or may be carried by women like a vanity case.

The casualty list among the rodents already is long.

The Theatre

After considering Ann Pennington, musical comedy star, Mona Ray, 14, a practically unknown, has been selected to portray the part of kink-headed "Topsy" in Universal's mammoth production "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Mona will be transformed from a fair lass to a dusky urchin of nine by Director Harry Pollard, who has a special make-up man on the job. Miss Ray has played several juvenile roles on the screen. Her ability must have been recognized, as "Topsy" is one of the plum-parts of the present movie program.

Charles Gilpin, colored, is at work for the part of "Uncle Tom" after five months of preparation, and waiting. He will wear a Lou Chaney type of harness and padding to broaden and build up his shoulders, as specified in the story. He will appear much darker than he is and his make-up will be a piece of art.

Last Monday Director Pollard called "camera" for the first time on a scene for the picture. Although a California sun was shining a light snow fell outside the "set" and it furnished realistic chill. George West is the first colored actor other than Gilpin to face the camera, taking the part of a servant in the Shelby home. Gertrude Howard takes the part of Aunt Chloe, Baby Peters, as Tom's baby, Hartwell Rice and Clark Moore as coachmen, Jim Anderson as Tom's driver and the Misses Catherine Carrett, Anna Johnson and Mary Washington as housemaids, all colored, are scheduled next.

"I had stomach trouble for nearly twenty years, also constipation which filled my system with gas and fever. I could not do my work, and while I was down sick a lady from out of town sent me a bottle of MAYR'S which proved truly wonderful. I believe it is the best medicine on earth." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. Modish Mitzi

THE GOOFER ATTEMPTS TO COME TO THE INTERROGATION POINT

Jay V. Jay

"Mitzi, I want to ask you something, something personal" pleads the Goof. Right in the middle of Des Moines, Iowa, where they are visiting. "That," points out Mitzi reading the sign, "is the Coliseum, you know." Which is hardly encouraging conversation. The gesture however brings attention to the pleated sleeve which joins the odd yoke of her dress.

"Now, Mitzi, I hope not to bother you," commences the Goof attempting to continue this serious tete-a-tete when along comes Pretty Polly. There is such a restraint in the atmosphere that Polly rolls her blue eyes knowingly and makes it worse by shaking her fingers and saying: "What are you two stopping in front of the Court House for? I've been inside and there are miles of people applying for marriage licenses." The Goof blushes unbecomingly. Mitzi changes the subject by admiring Polly's two piece suit with pleated ruffles down the front and on the sleeves.

Tomorrow—New Features of the Fall Fashions

REDS TAKE LEAD IN NATIONAL RACE

Six or eight weeks ago, Carl Mays, artist of the subway ball, heard Manager Jack Hendricks of the Reds say: "I'll never start Carl again!"

That was after the underhand tosser had pitched miserable baseball in several starts and appeared to be decidedly off color. Hendricks was distinctly peeved but the threat seemed to work wonders with Mays.

On his next appearance he pitched brilliantly and he has easily won the majority of his starts since then. Tuesday he ran his string of victories to nineteen against twelve defeats when he let Brooklyn down with five hits, permitted his mates to win 7 to 1 and also enabled them to grab an undisputed hold on first place in the hot National League race.

By reason of an idle afternoon the St. Louis Cardinals dropped a half game in the race and lost first position which they had so confidently claimed as their very own for several days. In the meantime the Pittsburgh Pirates showed themselves to be still a menace when they trounced the Giants and advanced within a game of the Cards and a game and one-half of the Reds to make the race the warmest since the senior circuit came into existence.

Eppa Rixey, who blanked the Robins was sent back after them Wednesday by Hendricks while Jesse Barnes, a tough egg for the leaders to crack, was slated to work for Brooklyn. Rixey asked for the chance to pitch in spite of only one day of rest which exemplifies the kind of spirit that ought to help the Reds win the pennant. Jackie May, injured Labor Day, will join the team at New York Friday and will be ready to work in that series if called on.

The Cardinals played two games with Philadelphia Wednesday and if they find the band-box field to their liking, may take both games from the lowly last placers. In this event they can tie the Reds even if Cincinnati wins and if the Reds lose the Cards can regain their half-game lead. The Phillies beat the tough Chicago Cubs Tuesday and may be prime to push St.

Louis further down the ladder. The Cards have six games with the Phils, winding up with another doubleheader Saturday. The Reds go to New York for a series with the Giants after Wednesday's game across the bridge.

Manager Hendricks has been advised that the Red Club has purchased Shortstop Pittenger from the Louisville American Association club to join the team next spring. Pittenger will fight it out for the short field with Horace Ford. He was formerly with the Cubs.

DEMPSEY ROUTINE UNDECIDED FOR DAY

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 15.—Jack Dempsey's routine for today was a questionable matter when he arose this morning after a good night's sleep at Kerry Cottage.
The secrecy imposed on the camp probably will be lifted to allow newspapermen to witness today's workout. Otherwise the champion was inclined to consider the day his usual Wednesday one of rest.

BAR BANTAM CHAMP FROM ILLINOIS FOR LIFE; BOUT HALTED

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—To halt an alleged gambling coup, the Illinois Boxing Commission has called off the bantam weight championship fight between Charlie Phil Rosenberg, New York and Bud Taylor, Terra Haute, Ind., scheduled for tomorrow night, has barred champion Rosenberg and his manager, Harry Seal for life in Illinois rings and has awarded the championship to Taylor.

Rosenberg had previously been barred from rings in New York and California, following reports of unethical conduct.
The Rosenberg-Taylor bout, scheduled for tomorrow night was called off following reports that New York gamblers had descended in Chicago with heavy bets to place on Champion Rosenberg when Taylor had earlier been a top-heavy favorite.

The Illinois Boxing Commission gave as the official reason for the action:
"Segal and Rosenberg ignored our rules pertaining to forfeits after the commission had granted several days grace and further because of the injection of political and other influences pertaining to our appointment of a referee. Segal and Rosenberg, in our opinion are not the caliber of men who belong in boxing."

According to Chairman O. W. Huncke, of the Illinois commission forfeits should have been posted with the signing of a contract on July 24. The forfeit was to have been $12,500.
Segal held out his forfeit in an effort to see that a referee would be appointed who was acceptable to him, it was reported. The commission, however, heard through underground channels that gamblers were awaiting the appointment of a referee to lay a half million dollars on Rosenberg.
The gamblers, it was said, wanted to be sure that the decision would not be too unfair to Rosenberg.

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

A few jottings of the day by Samuel Peeps, Jr.:—To see if my milk man around yes or no, and worth to find nothing on my doorstep. Whereupon my wife did implore me to be more careful with my language she being frightened lest the neighbors hear and cause our landlord to make us move. Betimes to the postoffice where came a milliner's bill in two figures, which I mean to ask my wife about. Got too happy letters about my not having a grain of sense, jolly and well taken.

By the by to Johnston to see the Mastodon, lately dug out of the earth, where found hundreds had come also each paying twenty-five cents to see the bones, which to me was nothing more than a "white elephant," so poor is my appreciation of such relics.

Measured this day at my sewing woman's for a new shirt, very fine, with a pocket for a pencil and one for my watch it costing nearly ten dollars, but worth it, I'll be bound; for never in my life did I have one with sleeves to suit. Came a letter from my mother-in-law saying she is coming to visit us, so the day ruined.

In the late evening comes my wife with a pan of pop corn balls, mightiest crisp and good to take, so crunched heartily, until the clock went thirty after ten, when took a drink of my beloved cider, wrote a few notes begging more time on debts long past due, and late to bed with prayers, mighty tired and full of cares.

School Burns Just Before Opening; Loss $150,000 But Children Smile

Lives there a youngster who hasn't sometimes dreamed, with sweet delight, that his school burned down? It was hard, then, for youngsters ready to attend the largest and oldest school building in Spokane, Wash., to weep when that building was destroyed by fire as the youngsters awaited the opening day. The loss was a tragedy, however, to the tax payers. The damage was $150,000. Photos show the fire at its height at night and children gazing at the ruins.

Circumstances may compel another expedition to the western city of Managua, government palace in which is shown in lower view, to maintain order.

May Christie's "The Girl Who Dared" Starts Today

Generous Installment Opens New Novel Today—
—Story Of Mary Forrest Expected To Exceed
"The Gilded Rose" In Popularity

Chapter 1
ADVENTURE

Amid the incessant hum of twenty typewriters in one of Atlanta's busiest offices, the nimble fingers of Miss Mary Forrest clicked with the utmost speed and accuracy upon the keys of her machine.

Mary was twenty-five. Brisk. Capable. Not pretty with a novel, ethereal prettiness. Yet with a definite attractiveness of her own.

Her hair was auburn, dark brown, parted in the middle, its becoming neatness quite a pleasing contrast to the many pert and shingled coiffures all about. Her clear skin—a little pallid through seven years of indoor office work—was quite devoid of all those marvellous "aids" you read about in advertising columns, while her deep set, wise young eyes gazed forth from lashes that were just as nature had intended them to be.

In the workmanlike blue serge fashioned by the same nimble fingers that now clicked so fast and furiously upon the machine, the white cuffs camouflaged by paper ones (to save the laundry), Miss Mary Forrest looked a cool and pleasing picture—"just the sort of girl one would like one's brother to marry"—as a fellow-worker had described her.

But—tell it softly, and let no one in the office hear it!—in her seven years of work no one had proposed to Mary Forrest, unless you count the young theological student at the boarding house who had sticking out teeth and dyspepsia.

Today was Mary's birthday. The twenty-fifth milestone. . . . "I herewith enter the ranks of old maids," whimsically she told herself, forgetting that the United States isn't France and that on her twenty-fifth anniversary an American girl has at least a whole decade of fun in front of her and doesn't "coif Saint Catherine" . . . no, not by a long way either, let me tell you.

It was nearing six o'clock on this late December day and outside the Public Stenographers' office where Mary worked, the drizzle lay damp and cold on the pavements. For the capital of Georgia can be as disagreeable in winter as the capital of Connecticut.

"Awful night!" volunteered Mary's neighbor, a pretty pert and yellow headed miss, above the din of the machines. "My bean's meeting me at Five Points to take me out to supper and the movies. It's raining and here I am with my Sunday dress on and a brand new hat and no umbrella! Just my rotten luck!"

Now this same "bean" had once shown a decided interest in Miss Mary Forrest. His home was in the same northside section where she lodged. The pair frequently caught the same street car in the mornings and it was not long before an acquaintance had been struck up.

Yes, life had had a sort of thrill to it these days. But Mary's natural reserve had chilled him rather. She was too serious by far, thought he. Read stuffy books and wanted to discuss them. Didn't laugh at his priceless jokes in the hearty way that pretty yellow-headed little Janey did. Didn't care over much for theater or movies. Was a bit too . . . when it came to a good night kiss.

But Janey appreciated him and his good clothes and his good looks. So why worry? Life was short and a fellow liked a little fun and "pep" Mary looked at Janey with a sudden sharp contraction of the heart. Then, with her quick generosity, she said:

"You can have my umbrella. I'm wearing nothing that will spoil!" "Oh, I couldn't really. It's far too good of you. You're always doing something for other people."

"Nonsense!" The capable young hands clicked resolutely upon the keys. "I've no good clothes—no engagement . . . no best beau. So the umbrella's yours, and don't thank me for it."

At six the noise of the machines was silenced. Every girl relaxed. "Call from the Ardmore Hotel for a young lady to take two hours dictation," announced the "boss." Then, turning the leaves of a notebook rapidly: "Your turn, Miss Janey. I see you haven't done over time in the last two months. Come now, no putting. Fair play, please."

Two large, pathetic tears welled to the shallow orbs of Janey. Her baby mouth trembled with disappointment. "I simply can't! I've got an important appointment. Now."

"Come, come, now. No 'can't's' here. The only 'can't' we ever recognize is that we can't employ a girl who doesn't take her turn and turn about."

Only for the fraction of a second did Mary Forrest hesitate. Janey's "bean" who once so nearly had been hers. Even if it was her birthday, no treat lay in store for her tonight! "Janey's dead tired. I'll go instead. I'd quite enjoy it." She contrived a smile that was almost like the real thing, even though her heart ached with loneliness and her body with fatigue.

The employer hesitated. He was fair, but he was harassed. The reputation of his establishment must be maintained. Mary Forrest's work was so dependable, in antithesis to the yellow daisies' efforts. "Its for a writer. Pussy as can be. He sent the last girl back. And I know Miss Janey's spelling isn't"

that applies to me exactly, for I make a good salary"—her chin went up with a little air of pride that had a sort of pathos in it—"and don't think I'm complaining. I get thirty dollars a week. That isn't at all bad, when you think of the unemployed, and the way men's pay has been cut down." And then she added, wistfully, "But life could be so enchanting if I just had a little more—for trips and things—you understand."

He shot a quizzical look at her ingenious young face. It was ingenious, he decided. She continued earnestly:

"Though I love the South—I get a kind of 'wanderlust.' She flushed over the use of the foreign word hoping he wouldn't think that she was trying to impress him. "How I'd adore to travel! The longing almost hurts, sometimes. Often in the lunch-hour, I run into one of the hotels and get all their travel leaflets. At nights, I read them over and over, and bind them into books. And I fall asleep weaving romances about these places—"

She broke off, feeling that she had cheapened herself by confessing far too much.

"Please go on. I'm awfully interested, being an incurable rover myself. Not that I ever made any real money through my roving." The kind eyes twinkled. "Can't I hear about the romances, please? Don't shut me out."

stated, then she said evasively:

"stupid dreams in a practical life, that's all. I don't suppose they ever will come true but they lighten the dull days a little. So they serve their purpose."

The man opposite her was touched. He liked her little air of dignity so quaintly mingled with her frankness.

"Why don't you make the dreams come true? You're young, intelligent and I am sure—extremely capable. Why wait for opportunity to come knocking?"

She looked at the attractive stranger dubiously, as though wondering if he were making fun of her. Then, with a little smile that lit her whole face, up, so shy and sweet it was, she answered:

"How odd that you said that, when it's just what I've been thinking all day long today! You see someone . . . I think it was an English writer . . . says that one's birthdays should be landmarks where one does a sort of mental stock-taking, to see how far one has advanced along the road. He says it would save such a lot of misery and disappointment if one were really sure of one's goal and progress, while there's time enough. Women so often do their stock-taking too late."

The young man opposite her suppressed a smile.

"Go on, please. You have years ahead of you."

"Oh, no. That's just the trouble." Her frank eyes looked into his. "I'm twenty-five. I've been seven years holding different jobs. And I'm in a groove. Another year or two of it and I'm done for. I'm afraid to budge, and yet I hate myself for hesitating. Dreadful, isn't it?" Again the little wistful smile. "There must be lots of girls like me—"

"I'm sure there aren't many half as cool and plucky," he countered impulsively, "nor so generous as you've proved yourself to be tonight, in volunteering to work overtime, when you ought to be having a celebration that's due to every pretty girl upon her birthday."

Mary Forrest flushed. Had her ears deceived her, or had this wonderfully attractive stranger really called her "pretty?"

"How did you know it was my birthday?"

"You let it slip just now—the 'stock-taking,' you remember?" She gave a little laugh that was as clear and tinkling as a brook. The melodious sound struck pleasantly upon his ears, in contrast to another girl—an infinitely prettier girl perhaps—whose laugh was just a shade too loud.

"I have talked too much," said Mary Forrest, gently. "Please forgive me, but you've been so kind." She glanced at the cheap metal watch on the leather strap that bound her wrist, and gave a little cry of dismay. "Good gracious! It's a quarter to seven and I'm already due at the Ardmore!" She jumped up hastily.

"Don't be anxious, I'll drop you in a taxi."

Mary shook her head. "I couldn't think of putting you to the expense. I've been trouble enough. Please let me pay my own check."

Courteously he thrust her hand away from the bill that lay beside his plate.

"The check and the pleasure are all mine," he said quite formally. Then, turning to the waitress and paying her, he added, "Please give the lady's coat a brush. The mud is dry."

In a few moments they were in a taxicab and speeding along Peachtree Street.

"It's far too good of you to bother—" Mary was protesting. How dreadful to have run this Good Samaritan into such expense when she could see by his clothes that he couldn't afford it even if he was a gentleman and perfectly charming!

"I was going this way anyhow."

The cab was held up in the cross-traffic and a dilapidated flower-girl thrust a great spray of lilies-of-the-valley through the window.

"I haven't sold a flower today, give me, but you've been so kind." Only fifty cents, sir."

He took the sheaf of lilies in one hand, and got out a bill. "You can keep the change for luck," he smiled at the vendor as the taxi jerked forward and away. Then he dropped the flowers in
